Construction product manufacturers benefit from TenderSpace

Online platform TenderSpace (www.thetenderspace.com) is helping construction product manufacturers promote their products to project managers, specifiers and contractors.

TenderSpace is an easy-to-use online service for property and construction professionals, which has been launched to give contractors the power to target precisely the work they want, before the competition.

Using the Product Sercha tool, construction manufacturers receive requests from live customers searching for specific products. With Product Sercha, Work Sercha and Profile Builder working in harmony, Product Sercha allows manufacturers to start their sales process before the competition.

“There is no need to wait for buyers to come to you first,” explains David Stapleton, CEO and founder of TenderSpace. “Simply upload images, case studies and specifications and you will be promoted to specifiers at the exact time they are buying. Register for free and you can choose how frequently to receive notifications of new opportunities – and TenderSpace will deliver them directly to your mailbox.”

Manufacturers can also save time when responding to opportunities by using the free Profile Builder option which allows you to show the public sector procurer your business and products via a single link from TenderSpace. It significantly reduces time spent on the PAS91 Pre-Qualification Questionnaire (PQQs).

Editor's Notes:

Launched in 2016, TenderSpace is based upon a concept conceived by its founder David Stapleton, that many of the processes inherent in the property and construction industries can be simplified and improved upon.

TenderSpace simplifies and streamlines many of the complex and costly processes associated with property and construction related projects, opening up access to new opportunities and improving transparency and efficiency within the industry.

Based in Poole, Dorset, the TenderSpace team has more than 50 years of property and construction experience.
