TenderSpace awarded Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) Tech Affiliate status

TenderSpace (www.thetenderspace.com), the free digital project management, procurement and collaboration platform for property and construction professionals, has announced it is the first technology platform of its type to become affiliated with the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) and to be awarded the prestigious 'Tech Affiliate' status.

Easy and intuitive to use, TenderSpace provides a comprehensive set of free cloud based tools that allow people involved in, or considering, a construction project of any scale, to plan, design, procure and build easily and successfully. The majority of the management, search and collaborative tools on TenderSpace are free for anyone to use, and those looking to grow their business can use additional search functions at a fraction of the cost of similar services.

RICS accredits and regulates 125,000 qualified and trainee professionals within the land, property and construction industry around the world. It also maintains the highest educational and professional standards, protects clients and consumers via a strict code of ethics and provides impartial advice and guidance.

“We are delighted to have been awarded Tech Affiliate status by the RICS as we believe TenderSpace will provide significant value to any Chartered Surveyor and property professional,” explains David Stapleton, Founder and CEO of TenderSpace. “Our industry has historically been slow to embrace technological advancements but I believe that platforms and software like ours are on the cusp of creating the “Big Bang” for construction.

“We are forging crucial partnerships, such as this one with RICS, as more industry associations and regulatory bodies see the value in the collaborative nature of TenderSpace and the opportunities and transparency it delivers for its members.”
