TenderSpace welcomes CBI move to improve construction collaboration

Founder of online platform TenderSpace, David Stapleton, has welcomed the Confederation of British Industry's (CBI) announcement that it is working with future leaders in the construction industry in a bid to improve collaboration and digitisation within the sector.

The group, which represents a broad range of jobs including construction products, contractors and services, will report their recommendations to the CBI Council in November. Agreed recommendations will then be sent to relevant ministers and members of the Construction Leadership Council to help inform its work.

It is a move that TenderSpace believes is vitally important to the future of construction and will help meet the Government's 'Construction 2025' strategy targets of having an industry that is efficient and technologically advanced within the next decade.

"This is a welcome announcement and we are in complete agreement with the CBI that technology will define the future of construction," says David Stapleton. "Technology will increase collaboration, ethics and transparency in a sector which suffers disproportionately in comparison to other UK industries."

TenderSpace (www.thetenderspace.com) is already paving the way for greater collaboration and transparency and is one of the first companies in the country to be awarded Tech Affiliate Status by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS).

With its comprehensive set of free cloud based tools, TenderSpace enables anyone involved in a construction project to plan, design, procure and build easily and successfully. It aims to streamline the often complex and costly processes associated with property and construction.

“The CBI’s work is valuable as it will capture the next generation of leaders’ desire to improve and move the construction industry into the future in good shape. Technology is the great enabler and TenderSpace is already playing a part in improving the construction and property supply chain,” says David.

Editor’s Notes:

Launched in 2016, TenderSpace is based upon a concept conceived by its founder David Stapleton, that many of the processes inherent in the property and construction industries can be simplified and improved upon.

TenderSpace simplifies and streamlines many of the complex and costly processes associated with property and construction related projects, opening up access to new opportunities and improved transparency within the industry.

Based in Poole, Dorset, the TenderSpace team has more than 50 years of property and construction experience.
